About Communities In Schools

Communities In Schools of the Dallas Region has been serving students in high-need public schools since 1985. The CIS model is evidence-based and proven over years of research and practice. This method of addressing barriers to success utilizes on-campus staff to collaborate with educators, caregivers, and community partners. These on-campus staff, called Site Coordinators, work with roughly 100 students per campus to design individualized case management plans. Each plan focuses on basic needs assistance, academic support and mental health services. As a result, children feel supported, encouraged, and empowered to succeed in all areas of life.

Deja has been a site coordinator at Communities In Schools Dallas for the past two years, but her connection started much earlier in life. As a student in the program during her high school years, she credits her relationship with her site coordinator as “having a second parent.” Deja states, “You know how much they have helped you, you know all the time and effort they put into working with you, and you know they genuinely care. It’s hard to disappoint someone who is now rooting for you. My coordinator stayed on me about everything and I constantly came to her for advice on how I should go about my future because I trusted her. If I have never met my site coordinator I would not have went to a university. She was always someone I had looked up to and when I was a sophomore in college I made a decision that I wanted to be in the same position she was, giving people like me the hope and encouragement that they need. It is a absolute honor to be a site coordinator today.” Her experience with Communities In Schools inspired her to return to the organization after college, so she could impact lives the way hers was impacted. Deja thanks her site coordinator for supporting her with her journey of going to college and encouraging her to help other students succeed in life.

Since 2011, the Communities In Schools of the Dallas Region Golf Tournament has been the largest fundraising event for our organization. It is thanks to our sponsors that we are able to provide the resources our children need! We encourage you to invest in the future of our students with a sponsorship to this year's Annual Communities In Schools of the Dallas Region Golf Tournament.

We hope to see you in September!
